Forecast For East of England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Friday 25 Jun 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Cloudy start with some rain. Drier, with brighter spells later.

Today:
Rather dull and cloudy, with outbreaks of rain at first, clearing east through the morning. Most parts drier with warm sunny spells by the afternoon, although the chance of the odd heavy shower then developing. Maximum temperature 22 deg C (72 deg F).

Tonight:
Any showers will soon ease through the evening to leave a dry night with clear spells. Some thicker cloud is possible along northern coastal areas, but likely staying dry. Minimum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Saturday:
A fine and dry day for most with warm sunny spells and light winds. However, thicker cloud could spread north later, and the odd shower cannot be completely ruled out. Maximum temperature 23 deg C (73 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Often rather cloudy, but generally fine, with light winds and spells of warm sunshine. Low chance of showers, mainly on Sunday or Monday, but likely staying dry throughout.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.